Customer category prices

A customer category price gives one customer commercial terms for products assigned to a category. It avoids creating a separate row for every product when the agreement follows a product family.

Create records from the central customer category-price grid, a customer edit screen or a category edit screen. Each record can have quantity tiers, website scope and dates.

Example

Northstar Industrial receives a 7 percent discount on products in the Work Bags category from a quantity of ten. Create a customer category record with quantity 10, application type Discount %, value 7 and the intended base price.

Products must belong to the selected category in the current catalog. If a product belongs to several matching categories, the conflict rules determine which matching record applies within this price type.

If the customer's group also has a matching category price at the same quantity, the configured customer versus group rule decides which record applies.
