Configurable and Bundle Orders

Quick Order can handle products that need more than a SKU and quantity. Configurable products open an attribute-selection dialog, while bundle products show their bundle choices and required quantities.

Each combination stays with its own row. This matters when a buyer orders the same configurable parent in several sizes or the same bundle with different components.

For recurring orders, export the completed list. The option data is retained and can be imported again, provided the product options still exist and remain available.
